The new park at the confluence of the LA River and Aliso Creek in Reseda is now open. It features drought tolerant landscaping, decomposed granite walking paths with benches along the way, three shaded picnic tables, an amphitheater, and these three kinetic sculptures. Also, the Reseda community gardens are within it's gates.

Ken Erbeznik There are two entrances. One is on Vanowen, adjacent to the Aliso Creek bridge about a hundred feet east of Wilbur. The other is on Kittridge where it dead ends at Aliso Creek. Closest parking is on Wilbur for either entrance.
